

DEVELOPING EFFECTIVE PARTNERSHIPS: URBAN LEADERSHIP SERIES

Developing Effective Partnerships, presented by Dr. Stephanie Boddie, is the final seminar session of the 2017-2018 Metro-Urban Institute's Urban Leadership Series. In order to holistically serve individuals and communities it's imperative to establish effective partnerships among organizations. Join us Mon., May 7, 2018, as Dr. Boddie presents this essential skill-set for urban leadership. Networking and hors d'oeuvres will begin at 6:00 p.m. with the presentation starting at 6:30 p.m. The public is welcome to attend; admission and refreshments are free. Please register via Eventbrite to reserve your spot.

Dr. Boddie joined the faculty of Baylor University's School of Social Work in 2017. She earned her bachelor's in natural science from Johns Hopkins University. She also holds a master's in social work and doctorate from the University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Boddie continues to serve as a faculty associate at Pitt-Assisted Communities and Schools at the University of Pittsburgh. She is a co-convenor of the Transatlantic Roundtable on Religion and Race.

Metro-Urban Institute's Urban Leadership Series is comprised of workshops and lectures aimed at equipping organizations and individuals with the tools and skills necessary to address issues in urban communities and is facilitated by various community subject matter experts.
